

DENNIS reminisces over an old photo.

We saw The Producers at the Cinema. (sings) “Springtime for Hitler and Germany.” It was a Wednesday matinee, the day after Robert Kennedy got shot. ...He would die within a few hours. That was our true graduation present. ...My Mom loved Bobby Kennedy. Said he had a million-dollar smile.

DENNIS picks up her photo as a girl, shows it to the audience as it's projected.

That's her in the black hair. As you can probably surmise, she came from a world of-- how shall I phrase it--refined sensibilities? I mean a boy wearing a tie at a picnic!? I wonder who'd star in this movie? Mickey Rooney as the boy. Maybe Lillian Gish for the girl passing the plate. And my mom with her “It Girl” bangs? Well, she'll have to be played by Clara Bow. She'd liked the movies, my mom. As long as it was called Going My Way and starred Bing Crosby.
